COLONIAL THEATRE.

"The Black Leopard," Sensational Selig Jungle-Zoo Photoplay.

A picture of more than ordinary thrilling character, is the one at the Colonial theatre today entitled "The Black Leopard," It is a Selig Jungle-Zoo production and tells of a young gir!, whose selfishness causes her to send her lover to the jungle to secure a black leopard skin for her, his to be his sign of heriosm that will win her. He returns with it, but also with his face terribly disfigured as a result of a combat with a lion. When she sees his face, she repulses, and in the balance of the film is seen the outcome of the story, an ending unique and quite the story, an ending unique and quite unexpected. "To Cherish and Pro-tect," a mammoth three reel Broadway star feature, includes in its cast such star feature, includes in its cast such famous names as Harry Horey, Glad-den James, Estelle Mardo, Bobby Con-nelly, Roger Lytton, Harry Northrup, and many others. The story tells of a firm of brokers, whose misappropriations cause big stock exchange crash. One of the firm is in love with the wife of the other member, this secretly, and he causes a frame-up to be created and this results in the drawing of lots in which the innocent man is cast to suicide. He is about to do so, when he stumbles across the body of a suicide, and he exchanges places with him. The wife with her places with him. The wife with her admirer is fast pacing the path, and she is cheated out of her husband's life insurance, and left deserted. The life insurance, and left deserted. The clever husband, in hiding until the proper time, makes his identity known, and then things begin to be busy. Wonderful acting, splendid photography, beautiful scenes. "The Wander's Piedge," and many other features are for today.

DAVIS THEATRE.

"The Birth of a Nation."

The success of The Birth of a Na-tion is due wholly to the intrinsic value of the picture itself. Everyone who sees it becomes a booster, and the word of mouth advertising is the greatest factor of all. The Birth of a Nation is undisputably the greatest motion picture drama ever enacted for the "movies." Eighteen thousand actors, 3,000 horses and over 5,000 scenes are required to depict the story. The production is in every way the greatest ever staged. It required over half a million dollars to stage the picture. There was over 120,000 feet of film when the cameras and finished their work but the present the cameras and finished their work but the present the cameras and finished their work but the present the cameras are stored to the cameras and finished their work but the present the cameras are called the cameras and called the cameras are called the cameras and called the cameras are called the camera and called the c had finished their work, but the process of selection which plays such a telling part in these productions has reduced this to 12,000 feet. The amoun of film rejected, while photographically perfect, would make ten other photoplays as long as The Birth of a Nation but this learner of the production of the photoplays as long as The Birth of a Nation but this learner of the photoplays as long as The Birth of a Nation but this learner of the photoplays as long as the Birth of a Nation but this learner of the production but this learner of the production but this production but the produ tion, but this large amount was destroyed for there is one and only one The Birth of a Nation.

No one can afford to miss this spectacle which is now being shown at the Davis theatre intact with all effects and a big symphony orchestra. Matinee 25c to 75c; evening 25c to $1. Plenty of good seats can be had for
